Drain Snout® Drain Barrier helps you protect your drains

Chris Iuzzolino

In recent years, stormwater pollution has become an increasing environmental concern. According to the EPA's Toxic Release Inventory, more than 173.3 million pounds of toxic chemicals were released into U.S. rivers, lakes, bays and other bodies of water in 1996.

Drain Snout® Drain Barrier as a Best Management Practice

If you release water into public waterways, you may be required to develop a Stormwater Pollution Prevention Plan (SWPPP). This is a pollution prevention plan that includes best management practices (BMPs). Using a Drain Snout® Drain Barrier can be considered a BMP because it prevents unwanted liquids from entering your drains. It keeps drains fully functional, yet can be deployed instantly when an emergency occurs.
